BOWLING GREEN 79, BALL STATE 92

CARDINAL SIN

Ball State halts Falcons 12-game win streak

By Joel Hammond
THE BG NEWS

MUNCIE, IND. — Billed as a clash between the Mid-American Conference's two heavyweights, last night's game between Bowling Green and Ball State certainly didn't disappoint.

The Cardinals, who earlier this season defeated UCLA and Kansas in the Maui Invitational, got through a shaky first half and pulled away in the second half for a 92-79 victory in front of 6,938 at BSU's John E. Werthen Arena. The loss ended the Falcons' 12-game win streak.

"Going into the game, we compared Bowling Green to teams like Kansas, Duke, and Butler," said Ball State coach Tim Buckley. "They do what they do really well. It was hard for us to simulate them in practice, but our guys did a terrific job."

"Our second half push started at the defensive end. We came out and hit a couple shots, and Patrick Jackson came down and played well in the second half. He turned the ball over one time down, and he then came down and hit a three and a two."

The Falcons' Keith McLeod scored 12 of the first 18 points for his team, and helped BG jump out to an early lead 18-15 lead. A tip-in by freshman Germain Fitch helped BG to the biggest lead of the first Someone stole Keith McLeod's mojo.

McLeod's secret mojo power: take over when the game is on the line. And it appeared that the Bowling Green guard was about to break out that mojo with just over three minutes left against Ball State last night.

McLeod had already scored 30 points and just put in two free throws to total 32. The score was 68-66 with 3:38 left, and everyone who had seen McLeod's last minute spectacles this season knew the ball would probably end up his way.

When McLeod reached down deep to get that mojo, it was missing. Ball State guard Patrick Jackson had swiped away the late game heroics that fans were accustomed to seeing from McLeod.

After McLeod's free throws, Jackson erupted for the two biggest shots of the game that turned out to be the back-breaker and the end of the Falcons 12-game win streak.

"We have been relying on Keith a lot," BG coach Dan Dakich said. "I told the team that there would be a game when he just wouldn't be able to get it done for everybody. We needed more guys to do more things, and we just didn't get that tonight."

Down the court came Keith 'Mojoless' McLeod, ready to begin his own heroics. He put a three-pointer to answer Jackson, but all he found was iron. Ball State grabbed the rebound, and Jackson put up a quick score.

"The guy can score in bunches," Jackson said. "All I wanted to do was stay in front of him and keep a hand in his face. It looks like I did a decent job and I played a decent game."

SCHOOL SHOOTING: A man hangs his head outside of Appalachian Law School.

Virginia school shooting second in 24 hours

By Roger Alford
ASSOCIATED PRESS WRITER

GRUNDY, Va. — A law school student upset about his grades went on a shooting spree Wednesday, killing three people and critically wounding three others before he was wrestled to the ground by students, officials said.

The victims included a professor and the dean of the Appalachian School of Law. They were gunned down in their offices. The third person slain was a student, said Ellen Qualls, a spokeswoman for Gov. Mark Warner.

"When I got there there were bodies laying everywhere," said Dr. Jack Briggs, who has a private practice a half-mile from the school in this tiny western Virginia community.

Briggs said he had treated the suspect in the past year. He described the gunman as a Nigerian in his early 40s who had flunked out last year and been allowed to return.

"I think they were getting ready to tell him that he had not made the grade this year," Briggs said.

Dean L. Anthony Sutin and the professor were "executed" in their offices, Briggs said.

He said the gunman then went downstairs into a common area and opened fire on a crowd of students, killing one and wounding three others. He was tackled by four male students as he left the building.

"They just wanted the guy," Briggs said. "They weren't worried about their own personal safety."

THE BOWEN-THOMPSON STUDENT UNION

Bowling Green State University, January 14, 2001

Union fee adds to tuition

By Ellen Krull
THE BG NEWS

Since the opening of the new Bowen-Thompson student Union on January 14, 2002, the time has come for a new eighty dollar fee to go into effect.

When Bowling Green freshman Susan Riddlebaugh was asked how she felt about paying an additional eighty dollars for a new student Union, she remarked, "It is important to donate some money, but eighty dollars is a little steep. Maybe fifty dollars, but not eighty." The reason that eighty dollars was chosen over any other amount was that President Ribeau indicated that he did not want the fee to exceed this amount.

According to Union director Dave Crooks, the main reason this money is needed is because the University and state of Ohio only have one funding process that funds academic buildings. Because of this, in almost every state these places have to be funded by money funded elsewhere.

The breakdown of how this eighty dollars will be spent is as follows: approximately fifty dollars will be used to pay off the bonds that were bought to make this project possible while the other thirty dollars will be used to pay for the operating costs of the buildings such as electricity, water, utilities, salaries, the dining rooms, and programs that will help students.

When Crooks was asked how long this fee may be in effect, he did not have a definite answer but believed that it may be up to 15 years. While this may seem like a long time, Crooks went on to say, "Students will be the larger percent of users, and with sixteen weeks in a semester, it will only cost students approximately seventy cents a day. It will be money very well spent."

Trustee Jarrod Hirschfeld believes, "It is necessary for students to chip in a little bit. Without an increase, there would be less opportunity to expand growth for the future."

He also went on to add, "Eighty dollars is a small price to pay for one of the most state of the art student unions in the county. As students, we have a lot to look forward to because our University is making the best decisions for success and growth in the future."

Concealed weapon law sparks debate

By Will E Sanders
THE BG NEWS

What started as a traffic stop for expired tags now has both sides of the gun debate up in arms.

Patrick Feely was pulled over in Hamilton in 1999, and officers asked him if he was carrying any weapons. Feely told the two officers he did, but thought he had the right to have the gun in his car, under Ohio Law, he did not.

The Hamilton County Court of Common Pleas Judge Robert Ruhlman ruled last week that Feely, as well as all other Hamilton County residents, has the right to carry weapons in his car when he ruled that Ohio's concealed-carry laws were unconstitutional.

Ohioans For Concealed-Carry founder Jeff Garvas has praised the ruling by Judge Ruhlman, while Ohio Coalition Against Gun Violence Director Toby Hoover said the judge "has made a grave error."

"The Ohio Coalition Against Gun Violence believes that the Hamilton County Court has erred in its opinion," Hoover said. "This time a judge has decided that it is law to allow Ohioans to carry hidden loaded guns in almost all circumstance. That's not good law, and it's not good for the health and safety of the citizens of Ohio."

Before the ruling, only law enforcement officials or officers of the state and federal government were allowed to carry concealed weapons.

The lawsuit was filed by half for either team, at 25-19. The game was nip and tuck throughout the remainder of the first half, and the Falcons held just a four-point lead after McLeod's 18th and 19th points of the half. But BSU's Chris Williams hit two clutch threes in the last two minutes of the half, and only a Jabari Mattox jumper at the first half buzzer brought the Falcons to within two, 38-36.

Once again the two teams battled closely throughout the early going of the second half as fouls were plentiful throughout. Theron Smith, who came in leading the Cardinals with 18.1 points per game and fifth in the nation in rebounding, connected on 15 of 18 free throws for Ball State.

"It was a very physical game.

It's hard to get into a flow when the whistle is blowing like that," said Buckley. "But we need to get used to that in the Mid American Conference because every game is very physical. Everyone did a great job at the line."

The Falcons, though, still hung around throughout the second half and took the lead on three free throws by McLeod with eight minutes to go. After the Cardinals regained the lead, they scored nine straight points, upping their lead from two to 11 with 1:52 to go.

The game then turned into a foul-shooting contest. Ball State shot 86 percent in the second half from the line to seal their fourth conference win in a row.

"I thought the difference in the game was their shots went in at crucial times and ours didn't," said BG head coach Dan Dakich.

"We were both competing, and they just did a heck of a job."

"Petey Jackson was great; he hit a lot of big shots. When you look at Smith on film, he looks strong, but he doesn't look that big. He looks like an NBA-power forward, and he plays like it. He's got a calmness about him, and he does a good job out there."

With the win Ball State improves to 11-5 and 4-1 in MAC play with the win, and BG falls to 13-2 and 3-1 in conference action.

McLeod, who entered last night's play leading the MAC in scoring, led BG with 36 points, his fifth game with 30 or more points this season. Senior Len Matela was the only other Falcon in double digits, with 12.

Jackson led the Cards with 24 points, while Smith scored 23 points and grabbed 15 rebounds, his 10th double double of the season. Williams tallied 18 points.

A total of 56 fouls were called in the game, and the two teams attempted 72 foul shots. BG shot just 38 percent from the field and only 33 percent in the second half. Conversely, the Cardinals shot 59 percent in the second half and 52 percent for the game.

"Their offense is hard to defend," said Jackson. "I just tried to get a hand in his (McLeod's) face, and contest every shot. They move so well in their system, they don't stop moving. You have to trail screens, and it's tiring. You just gotta keep moving with them."

Chuck Klein, a private investigator, along with other gun rights supporters.

"This ruling will allow Ohioans to carry loaded guns in banks, stores, at parades, in restaurants, at ballparks, football games, in libraries, hospitals, shopping malls, at the zoo, in parks, on our jobs, in cars, on buses, at day care centers and where our children play," Hoover said. "Will the bank teller push the panic button when they see the concealed gun in a pocket or purse or wait until they are told it is a robbery? Guns will be allowed in the Ohio Statehouse, in churches, on college campuses and in bars."

But it does not end there.

After the ruling last week, OCAGV and Ohioans For Concealed-Carry have agreed on one thing. However, despite their different attitudes to the ruling, an appeal will be inevitable.

In a phone interview yesterday, Hoover confirmed that it has, in fact, been appealed to the Ohio Court of Appeals.

Depending on how the Ohio Court of Appeals rules the case, there could be significant changes to Ohio gun laws.

In addition to the recent ruling and the appeal, two bills are currently being discussed in the Ohio House of Representatives. One of the bills is similar to the Hamilton County ruling, but the other is drastically different.

"The first bill would allow Ohio residents to carry concealed weapons without a concealed weapon license unless you are prohibited by the law to own a gun," Ohioans For Concealed-Carry Founder Jeff Garvas said. "The second bill would require criminal and mental health background checks and firearm training before a concealed-carry license is issued."

If this bill becomes law, those wishing to get a license to carry a concealed weapon would need to submit fingerprints electronically, give their social security number, have training certificates and a collection of other information.

As of the time being, both the court ruling and the two bills are yet to be determined.

SHOE BOMB: Richard C. Reid, suspect in the bombing attempt of American Airlines Flight 63, appears center right before court.

Bomber faces life sentence

By Denise Lavoie
ASSOCIATED PRESS WRITER

BOSTON — The airline passenger accused of trying to ignite explosives in his shoes was indicted Wednesday on charges of being an al-Qaida-trained terrorist whose goal was to blow up the plane and kill the nearly 200 people aboard.

Reid, a 28-year-old British citizen and convert to Islam, could get five life sentences if convicted.

The indictment, issued by a federal grand jury in Boston, alleges Reid attempted to kill the 197 passengers and crew aboard a Paris-to-Miami American Airlines flight Dec. 22 before he was tackled and the jetliner was diverted to Boston.

Reid did "attempt to use a weapon of mass destruction ... consisting of an explosive bomb placed in his shoes," the indictment said.

The indictment said Reid "received training from al-Qaida in Afghanistan."

Attorney General John Ashcroft said in Washington that the charges "alert us to a clear, unmistakable threat that al-Qaida could attack the United States again."

"We must be prepared. We must be ready. We must be vigilant," he said.

The charges against Reid include attempted use of a weapon of mass destruction, attempted murder and attempted destruction of an aircraft. He also was charged with attempted wrecking of a mass transportation vehicle, a new charge created by Congress in an anti-terrorism bill enacted in the wake of the Sept. 11 attacks.

Reid had been held since his arrest on the lesser charge of interfering with a flight crew.

"The charges contained in the indictment are exceptionally serious and reflective of our intention to prosecute Richard Reid to the fullest extent of the law," said Michael J. Sullivan, U.S. attorney for Massachusetts.

Tamar Birkhead, one of Reid's attorneys, noted that Reid is considered innocent until proven guilty. She added: "We note that the indictment does not allege that any crimes were committed on behalf al-Qaida."

Ashcroft credited passengers and crew with stopping Reid from detonating the shoe bomb. He was overpowered by flight attendants and passengers as he tried to light a fuse protruding from his sneakers.

Setback in search for AIDS vaccine

By JOSEPH B. VERRENGIA
AP SCIENCE WRITER

In a study that illustrates just how cunning a foe AIDS is, a monkey that was given an experimental AIDS vaccine died after the virus changed just one of its genes.

HIV, which causes AIDS, already is known to mutate and grow impervious to standard AIDS drugs in at least half of all Americans being treated for the infection.

Now researchers have seen a similar outcome with an experimental vaccine that tries to stop the virus from multiplying. The mutation occurred in one of eight vaccinated rhesus monkeys in a Harvard experiment.

The findings were published in Thursday's issue of the journal Nature.

Scientists who reviewed the results described the monkey's death as "more disappointing than surprising."

It does not mean that AIDS vaccines are doomed to fail, they said, but illustrates how the virus will probably not be easily defeated or even contained anytime soon.

"It is sobering to find that a single-point mutation within the virus can initiate a cascade of events resulting in a clinical vaccine failure and death," said Dan H. Barouch, a clinical fellow at Harvard Medical School and lead author of the study.

More than one dozen experimental vaccines using different genetic strategies have been tested in various laboratories. Some of them have already proved successful for more than two years.

Unlike a flu shot, AIDS vaccines do not actually prevent infection by the invading virus. That is because HIV comes in many strains and changes rapidly.

Instead, the AIDS vaccines work to hold HIV infection in check. The vaccines are made with genes that carry the code for proteins in the virus. When the immune system sees these codes, it learns to stimulate production of virus-fighting cells known as killer T cells.

Details of one such vaccine program developed Merck & Co. were published in Nature along with the Harvard report. Company researchers discussed their progress at the first-ever AIDS vaccine meeting in September, and they have begun testing the vaccine in people.

In their animal study, the Merck researchers used the simian version of HIV. They said their best results were obtained by loading an SHIV gene for a protein known as gag into a genetically engineered cold virus. It stimulated the monkeys' immune systems to generate different types of killer T cells.

The Merck researchers subsequently injected lethal doses of SHIV into the animals. They said the vaccine has protected the animals, and they have not seen signs of the Harvard problem, known as "gene-escape."

"We've gone 500 days and not seen any escape," said molecular biologist Emilio Emini, director of the Merck trials. "It's something to watch for. But if the vaccine elicits a sufficiently broad genetic response, this is going to be an issue that we can deal with."

Bomber faces life sentence

By Denise Lavoie
ASSOCIATED PRESS WRITER

BOSTON — The airline passenger accused of trying to ignite explosives in his shoes was indicted Wednesday on charges of being an al-Qaida-trained terrorist whose goal was to blow up the plane and kill the nearly 200 people aboard.

Reid, a 28-year-old British citizen and convert to Islam, could get five life sentences if convicted.

The indictment, issued by a federal grand jury in Boston, alleges Reid attempted to kill the 197 passengers and crew aboard a Paris-to-Miami American Airlines flight Dec. 22 before he was tackled and the jetliner was diverted to Boston.

Reid did "attempt to use a weapon of mass destruction ... consisting of an explosive bomb placed in his shoes," the indictment said.

The indictment said Reid "received training from al-Qaida in Afghanistan."

Attorney General John Ashcroft said in Washington that the charges "alert us to a clear, unmistakable threat that al-Qaida could attack the United States again."

"We must be prepared. We must be ready. We must be vigilant," he said.

The charges against Reid include attempted use of a weapon of mass destruction, attempted murder and attempted destruction of an aircraft. He also was charged with attempted wrecking of a mass transportation vehicle, a new charge created by Congress in an anti-terrorism bill enacted in the wake of the Sept. 11 attacks.

Reid had been held since his arrest on the lesser charge of interfering with a flight crew.

"The charges contained in the indictment are exceptionally serious and reflective of our intention to prosecute Richard Reid to the fullest extent of the law," said Michael J. Sullivan, U.S. attorney for Massachusetts.

Tamar Birkhead, one of Reid's attorneys, noted that Reid is considered innocent until proven guilty. She added: "We note that the indictment does not allege that any crimes were committed on behalf of al-Qaida."

Ashcroft credited passengers and crew with stopping Reid from detonating the shoe bomb. He was overpowered by flight attendants and passengers as he tried to light a fuse protruding from his sneakers.

Setback in search for AIDS vaccine

By JOSEPH B. VERRENGIA
AP SCIENCE WRITER

In a study that illustrates just how cunning a foe AIDS is, a monkey that was given an experimental AIDS vaccine died after the virus changed just one of its genes.

HIV, which causes AIDS, already is known to mutate and grow impervious to standard AIDS drugs in at least half of all Americans being treated for the infection.

Now researchers have seen a similar outcome with an experimental vaccine that tries to stop the virus from multiplying. The mutation occurred in one of eight vaccinated rhesus monkeys in a Harvard experiment.

The findings were published in Thursday's issue of the journal Nature.

Scientists who reviewed the results described the monkey's death as "more disappointing than surprising."

It does not mean that AIDS vaccines are doomed to fail, they said, but illustrates how the virus will probably not be easily defeated or even contained anytime soon.

"It is sobering to find that a single-point mutation within the virus can initiate a cascade of events resulting in a clinical vaccine failure and death," said Dan H. Barouch, a clinical fellow at Harvard Medical School and lead author of the study.

More than one dozen experimental vaccines using different genetic strategies have been tested in various laboratories. Some of them have already proved successful for more than two years.

Unlike a flu shot, AIDS vaccines do not actually prevent infection by the invading virus. That is because HIV comes in many strains and changes rapidly.

Instead, the AIDS vaccines work to hold HIV infection in check. The vaccines are made with genes that carry the code for proteins in the virus. When the immune system sees these codes, it learns to stimulate production of virus-fighting cells known as killer T cells.

Details of one such vaccine program developed Merck & Co. were published in Nature along with the Harvard report. Company researchers discussed their progress at the first-ever AIDS vaccine meeting in September, and they have begun testing the vaccine in people.

In their animal study, the Merck researchers used the simian version of HIV. They said their best results were obtained by loading an SHIV gene for a protein known as gag into a genetically engineered cold virus. It stimulated the monkeys' immune systems to generate different types of killer T cells.

The Merck researchers subsequently injected lethal doses of SHIV into the animals. They said the vaccine has protected the animals, and they have not seen signs of the Harvard problem, known as "gene-escape."

"We've gone 500 days and not seen any escape," said molecular biologist Emilio Emini, director of the Merck trials. "It's something to watch for. But if the vaccine elicits a sufficiently broad genetic response, this is going to be an issue that we can deal with."

School shooting, law school style

Usually, when you hear about school shootings, the gunman is a loner child who chooses to extract his rage and frustration on teacher and fellow students. And the school is usually a high school or junior high.

The bizarre twist on this now semi-ordinary storyline is that the shooter was not a child, and the school was a law school.

Yesterday, a 41-year-old law school student who was on the verge of being kicked out came to the Appalachian School of Law with a .38 caliber automatic handgun and opened fire, killing three. Others were taken to the hospital and treated.

The yet unnamed suspect who had been characterized by his doctor as a "walking time bomb" was taken into police custody.

As unfortunate as this incident is, it brings to attention something that many have turned a blind eye to.

In the wake of the shootings in Columbine, Colorado; Pearl, Mississippi; and Paducah, Kentucky, safety in upper-level compulsory education schools have become a huge issue. Schools around the country have tightened security and adopted "zero tolerance" policies.

But what could and should universities like Bowling Green do?

One of the biggest differences between high school and college is that college students are basically allowed to roam free with little care from others as to where they go and what they do. High school students are virtually locked up in a building for eight hours.

As we sit listening to the mindless droning of our least favorite teacher, how do we know that someone won't pop into the classroom and open fire? How do we know that late at night when buildings like University Hall and the Technology Building are open that someone isn't planting a bomb in the basement?

We take for granted the general feeling of safety we have. We believe in our heart of hearts that the PED system and night guards that, as effective as they seem, are truly ineffective.

In 1999, The BG News infiltrated the PED systems of several buildings to see how easy it was to gain entry.

The basic point is this: We're beyond the age where our personal safety could be jeopardized in a high school shooting incident. We are not, however, safe just because we are in college, or even out of college for that reason.

Beyond high school shootings and college-age shootings lies workplace shootings.

There is no way to be completely safe. We don't encourage going through life always looking over your shoulder or panic every time someone walks into the room.

We do, however, encourage you to be safe and always be looking out for your personal safety.

Just be aware that this could happen anywhere.

Sky is falling (but no one cares)

U-WIRE Editorial

Ohio State University Lantern

It would have been the apocalyptic destruction of an entire country. Think Hiroshima times a few hundred. Think Chernobyl times a thousand.

Think about the complete and almost instantaneous destruction of you and everything within 4,000 miles of you.

Thinking yet?

Last week an asteroid whizzed past Earth at a dangerously close distance of 375,000 miles. That's close. That's too close. Do you know how close the moon is? Double that. Close.

Chances are that most of you were unaware of this event. Professors for Astronomy 100 might have told their students about it, but more than likely this is new to most of you. Maybe you don't care. This event was a big deal, though, whether you care about it or not.

For those who actually keep up with developments in the world other than the "war on terrorism" and topics covered by MTV news, my hat is off to you. You are aware of how close we came to a disaster of almost unimaginable proportions.

We've seen the media hype and Hollywood drama regarding an asteroid/comet natural disaster. "Deep Impact," "Armageddon" and a handful of made for TV movies made us all consider an Earth-bound space traveler.

It all began in the wake of the highly visible 1994 collision of the comet Shoemaker-Levy 9 with the planet Jupiter. We all watched in wonder as the huge collision awed us with its destructive possibilities. We wondered if that could happen here. What would we do? Could Bruce Willis and Ben Affleck save us?

There was a lot of public paranoia after that. The media beat it into us, just as it does with most everything. Eventually, this all faded into the next trendy, hip paranoia of the week, like the flesh-eating virus or the possible Fleetwood Mac reunion. All the NASA officials returned to their telescopes. All was well.

But then something like this happens, and where did all the concern go? This asteroid, named 2001 YB5, is approximately 1,000 feet in diameter and its collision would have had the destructive force of more than 100 atomic bombs. That would destroy about half our country. That means the remains would somewhat resemble an empty cup of pudding. Most startling, however, is the fact that the asteroid was detected only one month ago.

Read that again.

Think about it. One month's worth of warning time. That's nowhere near enough time to try to prevent a collision. Good luck getting Steve Buscemi into space in time.

The experts did not really drop the ball on this one, if that's what you're thinking. No, the reason that this "death rock" didn't give us much warning is likely because it is zipping through space at an Andretti-like 86,000 miles per hour. Scientists estimated that such an asteroid would have the power to destroy a medium-sized country, such as France.

As much as some of us wouldn't mind seeing the French succumb to such a disaster, it is important to consider that it could have struck somewhere important — like Malibu.

We needed special reports and bulletins and "Days of Our Lives" interruptions (yes, this was bigger than "Days.") We needed to know what was happening.

Mass paranoia is only annoying if the threat is not real.

However, this possibly life threatening story barely found its way into the news media, appearing on page 15 of your local paper behind several stories recounting the tragic life of some guy whose boss' cousin's best friend's sister-in-law died on Sept. 11.

The press had us scurrying for cover back when the threat of this "terrestrial squish" was virtually non-existent, but where was everyone last week? They were covering redundant non-stories like "bin Laden still at large" and "Chargers miss playoffs."

Yes, the current international conflict is capturing most of the news headlines, but that does not rationalize the neglect of such a near disaster. We were a few solar winds shy of being turned into tapioca.

The media is partly to blame, but so is the public. Very few people reacted to this occurrence because very few knew about it. Not many people have powerful telescopes mounted outside their windows, and those who do are likely using them for much creepier purposes.

So do yourself a favor and read newspapers. Watch CNN. Pay attention to news beyond the front page, especially news of scientific significance.

Be aware of what may or may not be about to happen, especially because you never know when you may have to kiss Malibu goodbye.

CLEVELAND'S MOST WANTED: Former Cleveland Browns head coach Bill Belichick (right) will be leading the New England Patriots in the playoffs.

Modell, Belichick face off in playoffs

THE SPORTS GURU

Craig Gifford

The NFL playoffs are in full swing and for the seventh straight season do not include the Cleveland Browns (three of those are because of a man name Art Modell.)

However, this weekend's slate of AFC playoff games should draw the interest, if not the ire, of Browns fans everywhere.

In one game you have the Baltimore Ravens. You know, the team with Art Modell who stole the heart and soul from Cleveland in 1995 when he took the Browns to Baltimore, leaving Cleveland without a football team for three years.

They play the Pittsburgh Steelers, who Browns fans have hated for the past thirty years. They are the Browns' biggest rivals and a team that all Clevelanders love to hate.

One of these two reviled teams will be moving on to the AFC championship game with the chance to go to the Super Bowl on the line.

If you are a Browns fan cringing at the thought of watching this game, maybe the Saturday game won't make you as sick.

In one corner, we have the New England Patriots. Now, Browns fans have never had a problem with the team, beating them the one time they played each other in the playoffs. However, the Patriots boast Cleveland sports' least favorite manager/head coach of all time: Bill Belichick.

In five seasons as the head man with the Browns, Belichick took them to the playoffs once and had four losing seasons. Browns fans were calling for his dismissal by his second season.

They play the Oakland Raiders, whom long-time fans of the Browns will remember for ending the Kardiak Kids era with an interception in the end zone during 1980 playoffs. The touchdown would have capped another comeback victory for the Kids. Instead, it ended a dream season.

Since the incident against the Raiders was more than 20 years ago, many in Cleveland have probably forgotten about it or are too young to remember it (like the guy writing this column right now.) Everything wrong with the other three teams is current.

With that said, Oakland will probably be the team that Clevelanders hang their AFC hats on.

At least the NFC games will be watchable for Browns fans who shouldn't have a problem with any of them going to the big game in February.

Cleveland's new motto: Any NFC team, for the love of God, please win the Super Bowl!

Correction — In the late 19th Century, an American newspaper reported that author Mark Twain had died. The very much alive Twain responded by saying "The reports of my death are greatly exaggerated."

The same is true of Paul Olscamp, former President of the University. In the Kurt Kinzel's Tuesday column, Olscamp was referred to as one of the dead Presidents that University buildings are named for. We apologize for the mistake.

Debris a cause for deathly Concorde crash

PARIS (AP) — A government report on the crash of an Air France Concorde confirmed that a piece of debris from a Continental Airlines plane was a factor in the accident. The report by France's Accident Investigation Bureau released Wednesday says the crash on July 25, 2000 could not have been foreseen. It also aims at what it says are sloppy operations by Air France.

More Taliban fighters arrive in Cuba

By IAN JAMES
ASSOCIATED PRESS WRITER

GUANTANAMO BAY NAVAL BASE, Cuba (AP) — Thirty more al-Qaida and Taliban prisoners arrived Wednesday at this remote U.S. military base, where officials warned that several inmates have threatened to kill an American during their time here.

About 60 armed Marines met the group, who arrived aboard a U.S. Air Force C-141 cargo plane.

The soldiers grasped each prisoner by the shoulders, leading them to waiting school buses.

The inmates' ankles were chained together and they wore bright orange jumpsuits, knit caps and surgical masks. They were also blindfolded for security reasons.

The latest group brings the total number of prisoners at the base to 80, said Brig. Gen. Michael Lehnert, commander of U.S. Joint Task Force 160 overseeing the operation in Guantanamo Bay.

"These are not nice people," Lehnert told a news conference at an aircraft hangar on the base in eastern Cuba. "Several have publicly stated here their intent to kill an American before they leave Guantanamo Bay. We will not give them that satisfaction."

Lehnert said none have been interrogated yet and it was unclear when or if they would be offered legal advice.

"They spend their days praying, meditating, eating," he said.

The temporary detention center can hold 100 inmates but will be expanded to hold more than 600 while builders complete a permanent facility that can hold 2,000 detainees.

Lehnert said the prisoners were being treated humanely and a team from the international Red Cross would inspect conditions

Thursday. He showed reporters a foam cot the prisoners were given to sleep on and plastic bags of rations that included breakfast bagels, fruit and beef stew.

White House Press Secretary Ari Fleischer said Wednesday President Bush was satisfied with the prisoners' treatment.

"It is humane; it is respectful," Fleischer said. "The president is satisfied that they are being treated as Americans would want people to be treated."

Doctors on the base performed surgery on a prisoner they said had been shot about a month ago in Afghanistan, the military said.

The surgery was performed Sunday on the man's upper right arm. The prisoner was expected to regain motion in his elbow and shoulder but may have limited mobility in his wrist due to nerve damage.

Palestinian found shot

By Louis Meixler
ASSOCIATED PRESS WRITER

JERUSALEM — A Palestinian man carrying medical supplies was found dead in his car Wednesday in the West Bank, and Israeli police said gunmen apparently mistook him for a Jew. It was the third shooting death in two days on the West Bank.

Despite the violence, Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat said he still believed peace was possible, and that his forces detained the leader of a Palestinian faction in the hopes he will reveal who assassinated an Israeli Cabinet minister.

Ahmed Saadat, the leader of the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine, or PFLP, was arrested Tuesday evening after he was summoned to a meeting with Palestinian intelligence chief Tawfiq Tirawi in a hotel in the West Bank town of Ramallah, PFLP members said Wednesday.

Israel has kept Arafat confined to Ramallah for the past month and has said it will not allow him to leave until the killers of Israeli Tourism Minister Rehavam Zeevi are in custody.

Israeli Prime Minister Ariel Sharon held the Palestinian Authority responsible for the latest spate of violence after nearly a month of calm.

"They (Palestinian officials) decided on a strategy of terror, and they formed a coalition of terror, and no doubt they are responsible for those dangerous developments," Sharon said.

Sharon also dismissed the announcement that the Palestinian Authority had detained the leader of a faction that claimed responsibility for the Zeevi's assassination.

"There has never been a real arrest by the Palestinian Authority," Sharon said.

Wednesday's shooting victim was 30-year-old Palestinian Shahada Dadis, a resident of Jerusalem who had an Israeli ID card and drove a car with Israeli license plates. His body was found near a Jewish settlement.

Israeli police said he was apparently killed in a Palestinian ambush after the attackers mistakenly identified him as an Israeli Jew.

A relative of the slain man, Dib Dadis, told Israel television that Dadis worked distributing medical supplies in the West Bank and that his car had been targeted several times.

At the time of his death, Dadis was taking medical supplies to the West Bank town of Jenin, Israel television reported.

The shooting came after the death of Palestinian militia leader Raed Karmi in a Monday bomb blast that Palestinians say was an Israeli assassination. Karmi's supporters vowed to avenge his death.

Bring on the show

LISA BETTINGER
NOW Editor

A new year has begun. For me, that means one thing: a new concert season. My goal is to beat my attendance record from last year.

Some people on campus are already talking about who they want to see in 2002. Of course, Dave Matthews is high on that list while others are planning on rocking out with Creed.

Other people are wondering if there will be a spring concert on campus. (By the way, please don't ask me about this. I know as much about a spring concert as my dog does.)

It does seem a little bit early for the general campus population to be thinking about it, but while eating breakfast with my friend (and our fearless leader) Kim, we came up with some ideas for shows that people would pay money to see almost anywhere. OK, we would pay money to see them. All of them are blasts from our pasts. God, I feel old saying that.

I am all for a New Kids on the Block reunion. *NSync and the Backstreet Boys owe everything that they have to these guys. They established the groundwork for every pretty boy teen dream boy band. *NSync and Backstreet have also learned from their predecessor's mistakes. When you have a cartoon show, you have overexposed yourself. Still, nothing compares to the glory that is Joey, Jordan, Jon, Danny and Donnie.

Another great blast from the past would be to put MC Hammer and Vanilla Ice together on the stage. It makes sense seeing that Ice opened for MC Hammer back in the day. Of course Vanilla Ice has taken a much more drastic change in direction than MC Hammer, but it would still make for a night of great music and fun as far as I am concerned. At least both of them put those baggy pants and glittery costumes way back in their closets. Come on, there has to be more to these guys than some good story material for "Behind the Music."

Here is another great idea for a double bill. Let's try Deborah Gibson and Tiffany. These two were the Britney and Christina of our generation. Besides, someone needs to come back and show these two, along with all the other little pop princesses, how a teen idol should act.

You don't go all vixen on us; keep it covered and think about your fans before you get dressed in the morning. Back off on the make-up and let your natural beauty come through. Neither Britney or Christina displayed any remote kind of innocence. Deborah and Tiffany were female teen idols with class.

One-hit wonders might be able to put on a good show. How about A-Ha, you know the guys who sang "Take On Me?" I would pay money to see a huge crowd try to hit that one high note at the end of the song. If Men Without Hats do the show, everyone can do the "Safety Dance." OK, they had two hits but does anyone really remember "Pop Goes the World?"

STAR WARS: EPISODE 2

2002 ENTERTAINMENT PREVIEW
STORY BY LISA BETTINGER NOW EDITOR

2001 was a big year for entertainment with movies like "Lord of the Rings: Fellowship of the Ring." 2002 is setting up to be another promising year for entertainment. Hollywood is the first to offer up the big releases of the year. This weekend alone, two films from completely different ends of the cinema spectrum are making their debuts at the box office.

"Kung Pow: Enter the Fist" is what happened when writer-director Steve Oedekerk got his hands on the 1976 karate flick "Savage Killers" and added new footage to it, including a flying cow dispensing milk ala "The Matrix." In order to create "Kung Pow," Oedekerk made himself the star, digitally adding new footage and effects to "Killers" and re-dubbing some of the dialogue.

If viewers are looking for more serious fare, there is the Ridley Scott directed action flick "Black Hawk Down." Ewan McGregor and Josh Hartnett star as two of the 100 elite American soldiers who get trapped in Somalia during a rescue mission. For Hartnett, it is yet another war movie, his most recent effort before being last summer's action fest "Pearl Harbor." For director Scott, it is the follow-up effort to the Academy Award winning epic "Gladiator."

Also opening this weekend is the Disney film "Snow Dogs." Cuba Gooding, Jr. stars as a Miami dentist who finds himself named in a will. When he arrives in Alaska to claim his inheritance, he discovers that he has received a pack of sled dogs. If that was not enough, Gooding's character finds himself being bothered by a local mountain man who wants the dogs for himself.

The rest of the year can pretty much be summed up with one word: sequel.

Leading off the pack is the second in the new "Star Wars" series. "Star Wars Episode Two: Attack of the Clones" is already under fire before its release because of the title. "Episode Two" will take place ten years after the events of "Episode One." Anakin Skywalker (played this time by Hayden Christensen) has become an accomplished Jedi apprentice while Obi-Wan Kenobi (another role by Ewan McGregor) has become the teacher. The mission for the two Jedi this time is to protect the life of Padame Amidala (Natalie Portman) who is being threatened by radicals.

Expect to see a long line of fans at the movie theater when "Attack of the Clones" opens on May 16.

Showcase Cinemas in Maumee already has ads placed for "Men in Black 2." Most of the cast from the first film, including Will Smith and Tommy Lee Jones, are on board for the sequel. Among the new faces in the cast are former "Jackass" host Johnny Knoxville whose role is credited as "Two-Headed Alien." According to the movie news site upcomingmovies.com, the film is scheduled for a July 3 release.

If aliens are not your thing, perhaps swinging British spies are. "Austin Powers in Goldmember" marks the third in the Mike Myers' helmed comedies. Like the previous installments, expect a great deal of cameos. This time stars like Britney Spears, Danny DeVito, and Kevin Spacey will be making appearances as themselves. Myers will not only be playing both Austin Powers and Dr. Evil but he will also be taking on the role of Goldmember. Like with "Men in Black 2," many of the stars from "Austin Powers: The Spy Who Shagged Me" are returning. However, Destiny's Child member Beyonce Knowles is a new face as nemesis Foxy Cleopatra. A tentative release date of July 26 has been set for "Goldmember."

Of course, not every highly anticipated movie for 2002 is going to be a sequel. Comic book fans will finally get to see Spider Man on the big screen. Last year the movie was making headlines because of changes that there made to teaser posters following the attacks on September 11. Tobey Maguire has the lead role. In this film, Spider Man is going to be a nerdy high school student. Willem Dafoe will be the Green Goblin, and Kirsten Dunst will be Mary Jane Watson.

Aaliyah's death in August cast a dark shadow on "Queen of the Damned." After her brother was brought in to help with the dubbing of her dialog, the film is set to be released next month. "Damned" is based on the Anne Rice novel. Lestat, who was last seen in "Interview With the Vampire," returns as a rock star whose music awakens the queen of vampires. Aaliyah's final role is that of Queen Akasha while Stuart Townsend takes on the role of Lestat.

After winning critical raves in "Vanilla Sky," Tom Cruise returns with "Minority Report." Steven Spielberg is the director of the film, which is based on a short story by Philip K. Dick. The story takes place Washington D.C. in the year 2054. The police now have a psychic technology that allows them to arrest and convict murderers before they can even go and commit their crimes. Cruise's character is a member of this Precrime unit until he is accused of a future murder.

"Minority Report" is set for a June 28 release.

Summer would not be summer without a cartoon musical from the people at Disney. This summer, however, there will be slightly different offering coming from the mouse. "Lilo & Stitch" tells the story of a young Hawaiian girl named Lilo who adopts an ugly little dog that she names Stitch. Now, Stitch is not your ordinary dog. He is a genetic experiment that escaped from an alien planet before he crash-landed on Earth. Like every other Disney cartoon, there will be a lesson to learn for everyone. Disney is also hyping up the fact that the songs in the film are classics from Elvis Presley. "Lilo & Stitch" hits theaters on June 21.

Movie release dates are subject to change. Check the movie listings or with the movie theater before you head out to the show.

Starsailor deliver with 'Love,' 'County' rocks out

Starsailor
Love is Here

In the early 90s it was Blur, then Oasis, then it was Radiohead and The Verve. By 2000 and 2001, the U.K. was gushing over Radiohead (again) along with Travis and Coldplay. England has had a tradition of sending over-hyped up bands. Most of them, with the exception of Oasis, Radiohead, and arguably Blur, either had one hit song or they became favorites for a small handful of fans.

The jury might still be out on Travis and Coldplay, but the next big hype has landed on our shores. Starsailor was already being declared the best new band of the year in England's "New Musical Express" before they had even released their debut album.

From the first notes of Love is Here, it's easy to see that the band listened to all of the other bands and more. The guitar line from "Poor Misguided Fool" sounds very much like Blur's "Coffee and TV." Vocalist James Walsh has just a touch of that Thom Yorke howl. If there is something that stands out about Starsailor, it is probably the fact that their first single, "Good Souls" is about (gasp) good people.

The average British music fan will probably find enough to enjoy here. Fans of Oasis, Coldplay, Travis, and pre-Kid A Radiohead will enjoy this the most. However, the rock scene in the U.K. needs to stop copying off of each other or no one is going to have any great amount of success. At least Radiohead caught on to that. Grade: B+

Various Artists
Orange County -
The Soundtrack

Much like the movie, Orange County - The Soundtrack, is well worth your money. This soundtrack features winning new singles from The Offspring and Foo Fighters. There are also many other great hits included in this soundtrack from bands Cake, Crazy Town, Lit and singer Pete Dinklage. This soundtrack includes a mixture of rock and punk to satisfy any listener's taste. In addition, several promising new bands contribute to the soundtrack. Punk band Social Distortion offers a live version of their song

"Story Of My Life." Rage Against the Machine fans can fill the void in their lives with the similar sound of Icelandic rap band Quarashi. Other new bands included on the soundtrack are well worth listening to. Rock bands Phantom Planet, Creeper Lagoon, and 12 Rods show much potential while Bad Ronald offer a little hip-hop to the soundtrack. Former Beach Boy Brian Wilson contributes two songs that add to the diversity of the soundtrack. There is also an untitled hidden track. While the Jimmy Eat World single "The Middle" is featured in the movie, it is disappointingly not included in the soundtrack. However, music fans will appreciate a limited edition bonus CD featuring new music from new artists. Included on this CD are

punk bands The Ataris, Riddlin' Kids; and the Sublime-sounding band Ill Kidd. Grade: B+

Mushroomhead

XX

Place System of a Down and Pantera in a very small room playing at the same time and each trying to dominate the sonic tapestry of the room and the result is a close approximation of Mushroomhead XX. The result is loud, powerful, nerve-shredding music that leaves the listener reeling.

There is good reason that this assemblage of musicians sounds like two bands playing at once; it nearly is. There are enough members in this group to build at least two fairly complete bands, including two vocalists with very distinctive styles. The result is a massive chunk of music with a feel comparable to chewing through a plank of oak.

All that said, Mushroomhead is far better than they have any right to be. The result of their efforts is solid and heavy while not completely abandoning some musical skill. Then again, as large as it is, someone should have some skill.

While Mushroomhead is a band that has some flaws, lyrics being one of them, they are well deserving of some space in a collection of hard rock. Grade: B

Vida Blue rings in new year

By Jon Wirtz
THE BG NEWS

Because of the tragic events of September 11th, many people were scared to spend New Year's Eve in New York City. In hindsight, there was no better place to ring in the New Year than the Big Apple, especially if you were fortunate enough to see Vida Blue perform at the Roseland Ballroom.

Consisting of keyboardist Page McConnell (Phish), bassist Oteil Burbridge (Aquarium Rescue Unit, Allman Brothers), and drummer Russell Baptiste (Funky Meters), the trio provided a night full of surprises. Given the members of the trio, many were expecting to hear jazzy arrangements led by McConnell.

However, his trademark classical grand piano was absent from the stage. Instead he played on a Hammond B-3 organ as well as a vast array of synthesizers. Given the recent trend of jam bands experimenting more and more with electronic sounds, it was nice to see that McConnell hadn't fallen behind despite Phish's current 15-month hiatus.

The show began with a funky yet mellow groove, and Vida Blue was off and running. With the brilliant lights of Phish lighting director Chris Kuroda providing the appropriate eye candy to accompany the music, the show was full of spacey jams and high-energy improvisation. At 11:59 p.m., in the middle of a brief funk number, McConnell began the countdown to midnight. As the clock struck twelve, the trio immediately went into the traditional "Auld Lang Syne" as thousands of balloons fell from the ceiling. Without hesitation, the band flowed flawlessly into the chorus of John Lennon's "Instant Karma." The soulful lyrics, "And we all shine on, like the moon and the stars and the sun!" resonated throughout the venue, putting many listeners on the verge of tears.

But the best was yet to come.

The second set came to a close, and of course the band received an encore for their unbelievable performance. Dedicating it to the people of New York City for the tragedies they've experienced, Oteil Burbridge played a heartfelt version of the "America the Beautiful" on his bass before McConnell got on the microphone to "welcome back some friends" of his. When he did so, out walked Phish guitarist Trey Anastasio and bassist Mike Gordon, and the three were united publicly for the first time since Phish's last show in October 2000. Both Anastasio and Gordon played guitar on an incredible rendition of Traffic's "Light Up or Leave Me Alone" as an euphoric audience danced their hearts out.

For the 2,500 lucky fans who were present, the night was one that they will never forget. To be in New York City on New Year's Eve only months after the events of September 11th, hearing unbelievable music and witnessing the reunification of one of the greatest jam bands of our time was mind-blowing experience. For those interested in a unique electro-funk trio, Vida Blue is definitely worth checking out.

Rockers Creed hang on to top of charts

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — It's a different week, but the same story on the album charts: Creed's Weathered again reigns supreme.

The disc sold 138,000 copies for the week ending Sunday to hold onto the No. 1 spot, according to industry figures released Wednesday. It's the album's eighth week in that position.

Very little changed in the top five: Linkin Park remained at No. 2, selling 99,000 copies of Hybrid Theory; Ludacris' Word of Mouf stayed at No. 3, selling 83,000 copies; Nickelback remained at No. 4, selling 81,000 copies of Silver Side Up. Nas jumped from No. 9 to No. 5, selling 75,000 copies of Stillmatic.

Music sales for most discs were down for a second week; for example, Creed had sold 166,000 copies of Weathered in the previous week.

The highest debut of the week was the soundtrack to Sean Penn's new film, "I Am Sam," which sold 36,000.

Rounding out the top 10: Pink's Missundaztood rose from No. 8 to No. 6, selling 73,000 copies; Ja Rule's Pain Is Love sold 71,000 copies to remain at No. 7; Alicia Keys jumped from No. 13 to No. 8, selling 70,000 copies of Songs in A Minor; the eighth edition of the compilation series Now That's What I Call Music sold 69,148 copies to place at No. 9; and Enya rounds out the top 10, selling 69,025 copies of A Day Without Rain.

BRIEFING

Women's track opens season with BGSU invite

Bowling Green, OH — The BGSU women's track team will begin the 2002 season at home with the BGSU invite this weekend. Head coach Scott Sehmman looks to improve upon his team's sixth place MAC finish in 2001.

Several returning members will help to achieve that goal of improving their rank. Included in that list are seniors Christine Thompson, Lori Williams, Janean Johnson, and JaVone Houpe; juniors Joy Echler and Mary Willems and sophomores Kerri McClung and Alicia Taylor. Looking to make an impact in their first season for the Brown and Orange are top newcomers Marquita McGowen, Melissa Krueger and Valerie Holland.

Tennis teams to open season

By Zach Baker
THE BG NEWS

With the spring season beginning this weekend in Indiana, both the men and women tennis teams are looking forward with high expectations.

The men's team, led by sixth year coach Jay Harris, is hopeful that the team will be able to build on its strong fall season, as well as to improve on its 82nd rating nationally.

"We had the best fall ever in my opinion," Harris said. "In several different tournaments, we manhandled our opponents."

The team will look for a strong season from a number of players, including junior Geoff Hiscox, who is ranked 70th in the nation.

"Geoff is one of about four guys who could play number one for us," Harris said.

Among some of the others who are expected to play number one this season are senior Vitek Wild, junior Nicolas Lopez-Acevedo, and Milos Jirout, a sophomore who transferred this season from a school in the Czech Republic.

With a strong finish in Toledo in the fall season, which saw the Falcons dominate seventh ranked Notre Dame and eighth ranked Illinois, Harris believes that while the team has earned respect around the region, the main goal is to become a national force.

Icers end 'camp' with RPI

By Erica Gambaccini
THE BG NEWS

The Bowling Green ice hockey team is in a lull right now, losing five out of their last six games, but they are hoping to turn that around in the new year.

The Falcons have treated their six straight non-conference games like a training camp for the second part of the season. After "training camp" ends with this weekend's series at Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute, BG will end the conference part of their season with 12 Central Collegiate Hockey Association games.

"We're still in a construction phase where this is just another week in training camp for the second half of the year," said BG head coach Buddy Powers. "The second half of the year starts with Michigan, and in these games, guys are lobbying for jobs and positions for the last 12 games of the season and, barring injury, we're hoping to put a line-up out on the ice that we hope is set for those last 12 games. You're either in or you're out."

Senior captain Greg Day said the Falcons will take on a new identity down the stretch.

"The last three weeks have been somewhat of a training camp for us, so I think everyone is in shape," he said. "It's a new year, a new leaf, and we're a new team this half. We're a hardworking team. We have a new identity this half, a blue collar team. We didn't really have an identity in the first half."

The Falcons went 5-13-4 last semester and so far this year they are 1-1-0 (6-14-4 overall). Traditionally, the team does better in the second half of the season.

Last year they went 5-10-4 first semester and 9-8-1 second semester.

"We've got to be the hardest-working team in the CCHA over the second half of the season," said freshman forward Steve Brudzewski. "We have to work through all the bad times to get things going. You'll see us come around in the second half."

RPI represents the final prep session for the Falcons.

"RPI is just another test to prove we're gonna be competitive the last half of the season or if things are just going to go the way they've been going," said freshman forward Ryan Minnabariet.

Coming and going

Former Toledo St. John's High School hockey phenomenon Ben Assenmacher has joined the Falcon hockey team effective immediately. The Falcons acquired Assenmacher from the Lincoln Stars of the United States Hockey League (USHL) in Lincoln, Neb.

Assenmacher was a forward for the Stars and had one goal and six assists this year in 19 games played.

He may get a chance to play this weekend as freshman forward Colen Pappas suffered a rib injury in practice yesterday that will keep him out for at least this weekend.

"Assenmacher will turn 21 in March, so he wanted to get on with college," Powers said. "He's a big strong kid. He just has to get acclimated right now. We'll take Ben on the trip. Whether he gets in the lineup or not, I'll sleep on that for a couple of days."

Another player who will not be with the Falcons this weekend is senior defenseman Joe Statkus. He has left the University and the hockey program due to personal reasons. He has reportedly signed with Rockford in the United Hockey League.

Statkus, who graduated in May 2000, was a two-time letter-winner for the Falcons and appeared in 17 games this season.

For his career, Statkus had 0-4-4 in 77 games played for the Falcons. He finished with 32 penalties for 64 minutes. His best year in the team was last season when he played in 33 of 40 games and had three assists (0-3--3).

Gymnasts uphold perfect record against Tigers

By Matthew P. Lyons
THE BG NEWS

"A journey begins with a single step." The BG women's gymnastics team took that first step on Sunday against the Tigers from the University of Missouri.

The Falcons successfully defended BG's perfect record against the Tigers this year with a 193.775-193.275 victory Sunday in the center gymnasium of the Epler Complex.

BG started out with a strong performance on the vault. Freshman Kristen DiPietro made her first appearance for the University with a score of 9.675. Senior Marny Oestreg led the Falcons with a 9.9 score. Alisha Robinson from Missouri won the vault with a 9.925.

Stephanie Sams got BG going on bars with a 9.525. The bars squad finished the event with a score of 48.70. Midway through the meet BG had established a .975 lead over Missouri.

A fall on the beam that could have spelled disaster was turned into triumph with five strong performances for the Falcons. Senior leadership showed through from Mindy Untch, but it was junior Kathy Emerson who had the high score on beam with a 9.85. The Tigers Alisha Robinson led in the event with a 9.875.

With the Tigers beginning to close the gap the Falcons took the floor to preserve the victory. Freshman Kristen DiPietro turned in a strong 9.70 score. Senior Marny Oestreg turned in the top score on floor with a 9.90.

Missouri outscored BG on only one event and Alisha Robinson won the All-Around competition with a score of 39.757. Senior Falcon Marny Oestreg scored 39.275. The Tigers clipped the Falcons on the beam 48.9-48.175. The win evened the all-time series between the two teams at two a piece.

Tennis teams hopeful to continue success of last season

"This fall allowed us to start thinking on a national level," said Harris. "We have never won our conference tournament, and if we win it, we will get a bid in the national tournament. Our schedule is very challenging, and we feel like we need to gain the respect we deserve."

A win this weekend in Indiana, the 46th ranked team in the nation, will go a long way in earning that respect.

On the women's side, head coach Penny Dean, who has been with the team for 12 years, believes that while the team will be in a rebuilding season with a tough schedule, there are still many reasons to be optimistic. With several members, such as the team's highest ranking player freshman Susan Schoenberger returning from injury, and the continued improvement of freshman Laura Kokinda there is reason to be excited about the new season.

"Laura has probably shown the most improvement from the fall, and we are looking for her to be in the top three this season," said

Dean.

The team will also be bolstered by the addition of Alyson Gabel, a junior transfer from Miami University, who Dean expects to also play in the top three. Dean is also looking for an impact from Devon Bissinger, the lone senior on a squad which lost four of its six starters last season.

"Devon is the leader, and she's ready to go despite nagging injuries," said Dean. "She has been a strong senior who has made an impact."

In the upcoming match against Indiana, Dean believes that if the team goes into the match believing that they can win, then they will be in a good position to have a strong match.

"I think it will be a good tool to assess where we are as a team," Dean said. He also noted that the team has a difficult game the next day against Xavier.

"These games will definitely be a test for us," she said.

The teams will play indoors at Bloomington Indiana, with the women's team playing on Sunday at 10:30 am. The men's team will play Saturday at 4 pm.
